IS KILLED BY LARGE MAJORITY

Andrews Denounces Detectives Who Trapped Legislators as Thieves and Thugs — Doster Indulges in Language More Emphatic Than Politely—Senate Probe Committee Gets Ready For Business by Electing Todd Chairman.

Columbus, O., May 11.—By the decisive vote of 22 to 2, the senate, after a lengthy and heated debate, in which dilatory tactics were employed, defeated the Grieves bill which sought to remove that section of the statute which provides immunity for assemblymen who appear before a legislative committee and tell what they know of corrupt practices in either branch.

In the course of a speech defending the action of the senate in naming a committee to investigate the bribery scandals, Senator Coke L. Doster of Highland county said: "To go with public opinion if you feel that you've done your duty." The Doster address was more or less paralleled by those of some other senators, although heated language was not generally employed. Senator Doster, before coming to the point where he told public opinion to make itself to a warmer climate, said he thought the indicted senators ought to be given "a chance for their white alley."

Senator L. R. Andrews of Ironton, one of those indicted last week, denounced the detectives whose testimony had brought about the indictment. He charged it "was a most damnable conspiracy." "By whom are we indicted?" he asked. And then he answered, saying, "By paid thieves, thugs and murderers." One of the detectives he referred to as an expeditious prisoner.

Dore Roasts Reporters.

Senator Dore, Democrat, of Seneca county, who rose also in defense of the committee, said he had always acted fearlessly, and that he had always been honest, frank and free in what he said and did. He said he didn't know he was to have been placed on the committee himself. He charged that the state of the public mind was due to the newspapers and said he had in mind a resolution to remove from the floor of the senate the representative of a newspaper which had said that 20 members of the senate might be mixed up in the graft charges.

Senator Deaton of Lucas county, Republican, told the senate that he had always tried to do his duty, and added: "I believe every member of the senate has tried to do the same." He referred not only to the matter in hand but to the entire work of the session. Senator Deaton blamed the public mind concerning legislative graft, and asked: "Are we to be the subjects of this kind of journalism?" He declared the senate was being pilloried and crucified for its action in naming the investigating committee.

The senate refused to accept the resignations of Senators Krause and Todd from the committee. Both returned their determination to attend no meetings and to have nothing to do with the work of the committee.

The senate's investigating committee organized by selecting Senator J. Todd of Franklin county as chairman and Senator Coke L. Doster of Highland county as secretary.

STOCKWELL LOSES OUT

Kills His Bill Providing For More Primaries.

Columbus, O., May 11.—By a vote of 14 to 18 the senate defeated Senator Stockwell's bill for the direct nomination of candidates for governor and lieutenant governor.

Those who voted for the bill were Cahill, Finnefrock, Frazier, Gray, Green, Haas, Hudson, Krause, MacDonald, Reynolds, Shaffer, Stockwell, Todd of Mahoning and Yeunt.

Those who voted against it were Andrews, Bader, Cetone, Crawford, Dean, Deaton of Champaign, Deaton of Lucas, Dore, Holdren, Huffman, Johnson, Keller, Kuhl, McGuire, McKee, Purinton, Todd of Franklin and Watkins.

Tax Rate Limit Bill Is Passed

Provides Ten-Mill Limit Except on Vote of People.

Columbus, O., May 11.—The senate passed the 1 per cent tax limit bill by a vote of 22 to 11. The bill was not amended on the floor of the senate. The bill must go back to the house for concurrence in some amendments placed in the bill by the senate taxation committee.

The bill provides a limit of 1 per cent on the tax rate, but excludes from this limit sinking fund and interest levies on obligations already accumulated and those hereafter accumulated by a vote of the people. The rate can be raised to 15 mills by a majority vote of the people.

Agree to Adjourn.

Columbus, O., May 11.—May 31 was fixed by the senate as the date of

Corral, Reyes, De la Barra and Limantour Among Those Who Aspire to the Presidency of Mexico.

Prominent among the men who aspire to succeed Diaz as president of the republic of Mexico are Senor Ramon Corral, General Bernardo Reyes, Francisco de la Barra and Jose Yves Limantour. According to the constitution, resignation is equivalent to political death so far as it affects the succession. The vice president would assume the executive chair, and he in turn would be followed by the minister of foreign affairs. In this case the vice president, Corral, is blind in Europe. Should Corral still be absent when Diaz gets out the new incumbent would be De la Barra, the minister of foreign affairs, who is the choice of the insurrectionists. At a popular election to choose Diaz's successor, Reyes or Limantour might be successful.

Rebels in Full Possession of Old Mexican Capital After Long and Hard Fight—Victor Proves to be Generous in Terms to Prisoners.

Brave Defender of Mexican City Driven to Desperation by Fierce Onslaught of Insurrectos and Treachery in Own Ranks, Hoists White Flag—Will Be Exchanged For Political Prisoner—Dead Are Buried and Wounded Cared For.

El Paso, Tex., May 11.—General Juan J. Navarro, defender of Juarez, surrendered the city to the rebel army of Francisco I. Madero, the step being taken only after he had been deserted by his captains, two of his principal commanders killed or wounded, and he was haunted by the fear that his soldiers would go over to the insurrectos if given a chance to mingle with them.

With 480 soldiers he is held a prisoner by the rebels. Navarro remained with his men to the last, and after many of his officers had quit and the command had been shot to pieces, the general retreated into the barracks on the southwestern edge of the city, where the rebel advance was fought off as long as possible.

Colonel M. Tamborel was killed in his own house during the fight. He was the commandant of the federal garrison and second in command of the city. Colonel Manuel Pueblita was wounded. Then the captains and minor officers began to desert. The soldiers followed the example, and Navarro was forced to retire with his men in a body to keep them all from leaving him. From place to place the rebels moved, retiring slowly as the rebel fire drove them back. The federals occupied the old church in the center of the town, the municipal building, the jail and surrounding buildings. These the insurrectos forced out and they fell back for a last stand in the barracks as the insurrectos ran up their flags on the different buildings and their comrades began to pour in from all sides of the town.

Will Be Exchanged. General Navarro is to be exchanged for Eduardo Pay, one of the insurrecto board of strategy, now a pris-

Nicaragua Tottering On Eve Of Revolution

President Estrada Resigns and Seeks Safety In Flight.

Colon, May 11.—Juan J. Estrada, president of Nicaragua, has resigned the presidency, and rumors say he is a fugitive vainly seeking to escape from his own country. The proclamation announcing the governmental change was issued at Granada, capital of the department of Granada. Vice President Adolfo Diaz was designated by Estrada as his successor. The resignation came as a result of the clash with General Luis Mena, minister of war in the Estrada cabinet. The trouble has been brewing for months.

It is said President Estrada attempted to embark upon a steamer at Corinto. He is quoted as saying that the United States most certainly would not be his destination.

SAYS IT IS TIME TO RESIGN

Is Called Down by Penrose and Borah, Told to Drop Personalities and Confine His Remarks to Subjects Under Discussion—West Virginia Paper Man Admits That His Company Has No Water in Its Stock—Farmers Enjoy Session.

Washington, May 11.—President Taft was accused of being a coward and lacking patriotism during the hearing on the reciprocity measure before the senate finance committee. The witness who relieved himself of these sentiments was John Strange, a former lieutenant governor of Wisconsin and at present a manufacturer of paper. He was speaking in opposition to the Canadian reciprocity bill. Strange declared that the president had yielded to the demand of the publishers of the country and negotiated the Canadian treaty because he was so cowardly that he stood in fear of his re-election. He added that the time had come for President Taft to resign. According to Strange there is no "love of country" in the Canadian reciprocity bill. Also "the spirit of '76 is lacking."

"This bill was conceived in cowardice and bears no semblance of American patriotism," exclaimed Patriot Strange.

Tickled the Farmers.

Strange's declarations pleased the delegation of farmers who were present and they frequently applauded. His remarks were not, however, well received by members of the committee. After his denunciation of President Taft he was mildly chastised by Senator Smoot, an opponent of Canadian reciprocity, and urged by Senator Penrose, chairman of the committee, thereafter to avoid personalities and confine his efforts to pointing out wherein the Canadian reciprocity agreement would be harmful.

The senate finance committee listened for more than five hours to protests against the reciprocity bill. The strangers attacked the measure vigorously. The Gloucester fishermen made a stab at it, and the manufacturers of paper declared that there was a gigantic conspiracy among the newspaper publishers to force Canadian reciprocity on the country in order that the publishers might enjoy the benefit. Judge Charles F. Moore of New York, attorney for the West Virginia Pulp and Paper company, explained that his corporation made only 6 per cent on its capital stock of $10,000,000, in which there was no water.

CLEAN-UP DAY IS FIXED NEXT WEDNESDAY, MAY 17TH ALL WILL WAGE WAR ON FILTH

Meeting of City Board of Health Last Night Promises to be a Memorable One in the History of the City--Dr. L. P. Howell, Who Has Had Years of Experience in Government Service, Chosen as New Health Officer--Crusade Fairly Launched.

The Board of Health held an important meeting last night, in which a new health officer was appointed and a day set when everybody is requested to join in a general clean-up of the city, and other important matters relating to the city's health were discussed and acted upon.

Dr. L. P. Howell was elected to the position of Secretary of the Board of Health and Health Officer, succeeding Mr. Sherman Murry, whose resignation was accepted last night. Dr. Howell will make a most excellent man for the position, as he has had experience along the line, and knows just what best to do to promote sanitation and decrease the death rate. Dr. Howell was for several months a sanitary officer in the Philippine Islands, where he stamped out the dreaded cholera plague in his district, and where he carried his life in his hands every day.

Health Officer Murry, who filled the position of Secretary of the Board for the last time during the meeting, reported that in the sixteen squares included in the Sanitary district, he had found forty unsanitary closets and notified the owners to bring them up to the proper standard at once.

MAY 17TH CLEAN-UP DAY.

It was unanimously voted that Wednesday, May 17th, be set aside as the first annual clean-up day, and plans were made for making the movement a success and every citizen, old and young, rich and poor who can do something toward cleaning up, is urged to co-operate with the Board in the movement. Talk clean-up, boost it in every way, and when the day comes see that at its close your place is as clean as a pin.

All Societies, churches, schools, business men and citizens generally will be asked to do all in their power to make May 17th the biggest cleaning day in the history of the city. The city dump will be open to all on this day, and teams will be provided as far as possible, but everyone is urged to make arrangements for disposing of their own accumulation of refuse, but if a wagon cannot be found, phone to the Mayor's office and if possible a wagon will be dispatched to haul the refuse, the owner to pay a nominal sum for having the refuse hauled away. Everything possible will be done to give publicity to the event, and to arouse the proper enthusiasm.

All business houses will be asked to close in the afternoon of the seventeenth, and all business men are urged to do this to make the clean-up as thorough as possible. In a single day the sanitation of the city can be brought up to a much higher standard, and every citizen should feel enough pride in his surroundings to clean everything up that needs it. Remember the date--May 17th, and get busy.

Lee Rankin appeared before the Board asking that the Board order the Children's Home trustees to return the Osborn child to its home.

This is the child which was removed from its unwholesome surroundings and taken to the pest house at the Children's Home, the Township Trustees, Board of Health, Police force, Children's Home Trustees and private citizens being instrumental in having the child removed in order to save its life.

The child has recovered, and the home has been placed in a more sanitary condition. The mother asks that the child be returned, and Attorney Rankin insisted that the child had been unlawfully removed from its home, although, to use his own words, "It was beyond question a God-send to have the child removed." The Board refused to take action, stating that it had no power to order the child restored, whereupon Mr. Rankin declared he would have the child out of the Home before sunset tonight if it required habeas-corpus proceedings.

It was decided that no more meat must be hauled from the slaughter houses to this city in open wagons, but that as quickly as possible all meat dealers hauling meat must have fly tight and dust tight covered wagons for this purpose. This is a commendable move and will insure greater purity of the meat.

The question of whether or not an outside closet could be allowed to remain on the side of a lot adjoining a neighbor's house, and the law was found to require all closets removed by declaring them a nuisance where they annoyed the neighbors. All persons thus annoyed should appeal to the Health Officer.

The secretary was ordered to notify Chas. Persinger that all tenants in the Arcade livery stable building must be moved out without delay until the place could be placed in a sanitary condition. The place is claimed to be repulsive, and most unsanitary, yet occupied by several tenants who apparently do not try to keep the place clean.

Relentless war on manure piles is what the Board advocates, as the manure piles are the breeding places for flies, and flies are the carriers of all forms of disease germs. No manure pile will be allowed to remain over five days unless covered fly tight. From now forward no manure piles will be tolerated in the alleys, as they encroach on public right of way and the owner is liable to fine.

All surface wells, where found to be liable to contamination, will receive attention. All cases of typhoid fever or other contagious disease of like nature, must be reported to the Health Officer by the physician under whose care the patient is.

Adjournment was taken until Friday night, when further plans will be made for clean-up day.

Reid Introduces A New Bill

In the Ohio House of Representatives on Wednesday Representative C. A. Reid, of this county, introduced a bill providing that wills shall be contested, if at all, within one year after the date of the order admitting them to probate.

Under the law, as it exists today, any party interested may contest the validity of any last will within two years after the date of the order admitting it to probate.

If Representative Reid's bill becomes a law, the time will be reduced by one-half and will prove a highly satisfactory change, looking to the early settlement of the questions.

ISN'T HE EMPHATIC?

During a speech by Senator Green, after Senator Todd had spoken yesterday in the Ohio Senate on the bill of Senator Hudson to investigate the bribery charges, Senator Andrews asked: "Do you cater to public sentiment or to the truth?"

SENATOR COKE L. DOSTER

"To H--I With Public."

Senator Doster of this district then assumed a defiant attitude in challenging public sentiment. In an impassioned speech he declared his faith in the honesty of the Senate. "If you have done your duty and you know it, to h--I with public opinion," said he.

He did not believe that Lieutenant Governor Nichols was so thin-skinned as to regard the Senate's action in going over his head as an insult.

When asked to express his views on the Hudson bill, Senator Doster said, "I can only say that I want an honest and full investigation."

McBee Released On Bail Bond

With the assurance that Ralph West will recover, Jesse McBee, who stabbed him while under the influence of liquor in Jeffersonville, one week ago Saturday night, was yesterday evening released on $500 bond for his appearance before the grand jury at the next session.

Two brothers and a brother-in-law of McBee's went on his bond, and McBee was very glad to breathe the fresh air once more. He will resume work in this county. West continues to improve rapidly, and within a short time will be all right.

Blackmore Takes New Livery Barn

The new Hays livery barn, corner Hinde and Market street is rapidly nearing completion, and Mr. Ora Blackmore has moved his livery business into the structure and is ready to see his old friends and patrons once more and furnish them with satisfactory service.

The new barn is a great improvement over the old structure, and has plenty of room for a large number of horses. Ladies' and gents' waiting rooms are on either side of the entrance, and the entire barn is fully equipped for satisfactory services.

Operation Saves Life

Mr. Frank Colwell, formerly of this city, now making headquarters in Columbus, while traveling for the Deisel Wemmer Co., underwent a serious operation at the Protestant Hospital, which undoubtedly has saved his life.

Mr. Colwell came in from a trip for his company Wednesday suffering greatly. He was taken at once to the hospital and put under the knife, a tumor being removed.

The attending physicians said that he would not have lived six months had not prompt action been taken.

Mr. Colwell's many Washington friends are hoping for his complete recovery to health.

STRICKEN WITH APOPLEXY.

Following months of ill health, the result of serious heart trouble, Col. C. D. Vincent suffered an apoplectic stroke Wednesday evening at his home on Court street.

Col. Vincent's condition was critical last night but is showing slight improvement today.

It is worth your while to have a look at these up-to-date windows.

DO GHOSTS HAUNT SWAMPS?

No, Never. Its foolish to fear a fancied evil, when there are real and deadly perils to guard against in swamps and marshes, bayous, and lowlands. These are the malaria germs that cause ague, chills and fever, weakness, aches in the bones and muscles and may induce deadly typhoid. But Electric Bitters destroys and casts out these vicious germs from the blood. "Three bottles drove all the malaria from my system," wrote Wm. Fretwell, of Lucama, N. C., "and I've had fine health ever since." Use this safe, sure remedy only. 50c at Blackmer & Tanquary.

Congressman J. D. Post arrived home from Washington last evening called here by important matters in court demanding his attention. Notably the injunction case of S.

HON. J. D. POST

Cockerill vs. Craig Bros., in which the plaintiff seeks to enjoin the tearing out of the stairway and hallway in the building occupied by the Craig Bros. store.

The case is assigned for trial on Monday next and Mr. Post and John Logan represent the defendants and Humphrey Jones represents the plaintiff.

Mr. Post is highly pleased with the progress thus far made by the National House of Representatives. He is an enthusiastic supporter of Governor Harmon for the Democratic presidential nomination and expresses himself as confident that the Governor will land the coveted honor.

His return to Congress will be governed largely by the time required to attend to his legal business here.

During his absence a multitude of matters have accumulated which demand his attention and the Congressman begged for the present not to be interrupted with any extended discussion of public affairs or the political situation at the National capital.

Bible Class Organized

In response to invitations for a Kensington, issued by Mrs. Mary B. Hale to the members of her Bible class in the Presbyterian church, there was a gathering at Mrs. Hale's pretty home Wednesday afternoon that was productive of an important organization.

Under the direction of their teacher the class organized according to the standard of the organization of the State International Sunday School Association, with the necessary officers and committees.

Mrs. Charles Watson was elected president; Miss Dora Eggleston, vice president; Mrs. Fritz Meier, secretary; Mrs. Poole, treasurer. These officers with Mrs. Hale forming the executive board.

A constitution was adopted. There was a large attendance and a good deal of enthusiasm.

Mrs. Hale served a tempting luncheon and the social features of the afternoon were very enjoyable.

SPRING DANCE.

A spring dance of more than ordinary pleasure and gaiety, with the U. R. K. P. as sponsors, was given at the K. P. Hall Wednesday evening.

Forty couples took part in the grand march.

Horstman and Eyre furnished delightful music and Smith Brothers served light refreshments.

The U. R. K. P. committee having all arrangements in charge was composed of Messrs. Harve Smith, Jesse Blackmer and Chas. B. Parker.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Eichelberger, Mr. and Mrs. John Cannon, Messrs. Brock and Allen attended from Jeffersonville.

Young Pianists

The second of Miss Light's annual May recitals passed off successfully, with the pupils appearing to advantage in their renditions, mostly played without music. At this recital the pupils were older than at the first recital, but those most advanced will play on Friday evening.

Among the most advanced of last night's recital was Miss Ruth Reid, who played a Sonatine—Kuhlau—in three movements, a very difficult number, beautifully, and Miss Doris McFadden, a double number, and Miss Jean Fitzgerald a left-handed waltz, that were exceptionally well rendered.

Misses Gretchen Willis, Helen Persinger and Carrie Willis played with fine expression and Misses Jeanette Weaver and Ruth Brownell showed decided improvement in their pretty numbers.

The four boys who played, Edwards Hopkins, Albert Briggs, Lavine Caswell and Paul Craig did splendidly and the duet by Edwards Hopkins and Paul Craig received spontaneous applause.

A trio by Misses Carrie Willis, Jean Fitzgerald and Doris McFadden was pretty and a duet brilliantly played by two advanced pupils, Misses Dorothy Saxton and Gladys Locke, closed the program.

The pupils showed increased self-possession and the results of hard work in their numbers.

DELIGHTFULLY ENTERTAINED.

The ladies of the Women's Home Missionary Society of Grace church were indebted to Mrs. Aurelia Westfield and daughter, Mrs. R. C. Peddicord for a most delightful afternoon Wednesday, the hospitable home of Mrs. Peddicord being thrown open for the occasion.

The assisting hostesses were Mrs. James Dunn, Mrs. Henry Brownell and Mrs. William McClain.

Splendid reports were listened to from all divisions of the society. Arrangements were made for the ladies of the Society to attend the district convention to be held at Mt. Carmel, May the 19th, in a body. Mrs. W. E. Ireland is the district president, and will preside at this meeting.

The business finished an interesting program was presented.

Mrs. George Hays had an able paper on "Porto Rico" and Mrs. T. F. Brown an entertaining one on "Porto Rican Girls". Mrs. Werter Shoop favored the guests with two beautiful solos and Mrs. C. H. Murray, two artistically rendered piano solos, that were enjoyed.

A delicious collation was served and a delightful social time enjoyed by all.

An Embarrassing Situation.

A young man fresh from the varsity, where he had excelled in athletics, presented himself for ordination. The bishop, as was his custom, entertained the candidates at the palace, and after dinner the usual informal evening party took place. At this function the young man referred to entered into conversation with an affable gentleman in clerical attire whom he found standing in leisurely fashion just within the drawing room door. "Who's that rather scrumptious looking girl on the sofa?" said he. "She's my wife," replied the affable cleric, with an amused smile. The young candidate was silenced for a moment, then he stammered: "I am sure I beg ten thousand pardons! I thought she was the bishop's daughter." "So she is," was the quiet rejoinder, "and I'm his lordship's domestic chaplain."

The Secret Test.

"How," the president of the Fat Man's club was asked, "did you prevent fraud among your applicants for membership? Didn't some men try to get in that weren't up to the standard weight?"

"Yes," the portly officer replied, "but it was no use. Applications had to be presented in person at the Polk building, fifth floor. There was no elevator. The applicant climbed the five flights of stairs."

"At the top he met a man who asked, 'Were you looking for the Fat Man's club?'"

"Yes." "The main office is on the first floor," the man said. "Your application is rejected. We receive no man who can climb five flights of stairs."—Youth's Companion.

THE GOOD AND THE BAD.

Julius W. Hopkins, the confessed Cleveland embezzler, as he sat Tuesday gazing through the barred windows of the jail out into the open air and bright sunlight, fully realized that he had broken one of the ten commandments, "Thou shalt not steal."

He told his story—a short one, but a complete one—to the officials who were charged with the duty of holding him in custody.

"I wanted my wife to be happy," he half whispered.

He had told, steadily and clearly, how he stole $114,850 from the bank. Then came the mention of his dead wife, whom he buried two brief months ago.

"That—that is the sore spot," he said, brushing his hand across his eyes. "While she lived I wanted her to be happy and comfortable. I was getting only $1200 and $1400 a year, eight years ago, when I began to—when it all started. I took a little at first. It went to $25,000, though, in three years."

"I wanted to see her well-dressed and enjoying the little luxuries that other women have. Since she died I have lived in the simplest style."

Hopkins said that he had no thought of committing suicide; that he was no coward; that his son, who was at school at Ashville, N. C., could bear it because he was as brave as his father.

The story of course is a pathetic one, as all such stories are and the unusually sad feature in connection with this case is that in the story told, the man is shown to possess more good than bad qualities, many people, especially the tender-hearted, will emphatically announce, as they so often do, "That man is not a criminal."

But he is a criminal, nevertheless, and a criminal of the most dangerous type. His story proves that he violated knowingly and deliberately the statutes of his state and one of the ten commandments.

It shows that his love for his wife was weakness and not strength. He did not steal to make her happy in the true sense, he did not steal to provide for her with the necessities of life, he did not steal to provide her with the comforts of life even, but he stole in order that he might shower luxuries upon her and maintain her in a position which his fortunes did not warrant.

The old, old story of living on a false plane, living on a plane which the natural ability and energy of the man could not honestly maintain.

Perhaps the more charitably inclined will say that after all it was a mistaken kindness only which led him into wrong doing.

The facts disclosed by Hopkins' story scarcely warrant such a conclusion.

The good wife who is now in her grave would undoubtedly have frowned on such a course, and would have been content with such comforts as could honestly have been furnished by the husband, and the motive for the theft was more to gratify the vanity of the embezzler than to gratify a desire of the wife.

It is more than probable that he wanted to see her dressed and maintained in a manner which his income did not warrant, far more than she desired it.

Sad case!

Yes, all such cases are sad. It is never a pleasing thing to learn that a fellow-man has allowed his weaknesses to triumph over his better judgment and compelled him to do that which he knows is wrong, both because it is forbidden by man-made laws and wrong in itself as violating the express commandment of the creator.

Sad as the case is it does not compare with that one of the thief who steals bread that his children may not starve.

People should not permit themselves, as is so often the case, to be blinded by the sham or surface respectability which Hopkins' theft of over one hundred thousand dollars of his employers' money has enabled him to surround himself.

When the story is understood it teaches us that vanity—that greatest weakness—is the controlling force in this misguided man's life. It teaches us by another terrible example that this weakness is too often mistaken for that strongest and noblest of human virtues—kindness to, and love for those who depend upon us.

It shows us the inevitable close of all careers built upon a false basis and the futile desire possessed by some men to live at the top of the pot, where the laws of nature have decreed that they shall not live.

When men learn that some of the vanities of life must be strangled and controlled instead of fed and pampered at any cost, such stories will cease to be told and not before.

Man is a strange mixture of good and bad at the best, but we should be able in others at least to distinguish the good and the bad and never mistake the latter, no matter how disguised, for the former.

Hopkins is a criminal on his own statement.

AN ANGEL ARRESTED.

"You're arrested, mum!" bawled Officer O'Rourke, as the flying green car in front slowed down, so that his humming, throbbing motorcycle, pulled up near enough for him to be heard.

"You're arrested, mum, for exceeding the speed limit and scarin' a good half av the men, women, babies and horses in the park out of their senses!" he called again, as No. 2383 came to a standstill and he could pull alongside.

"You're arrested, mum!" he announced for the third time as he dismounted and faced the smiling lady of the car. "I take ye into custody for makin' av a new record through the park."

Then Officer O'Rourke's great rosy face grew pale and his twinkling eyes grew sober.

"Snakes of saint Patrick!" he cried, crestfallen. "It's the blessed, good lady of Delmont street!"

The good lady of Delmont street laughed like the ripple of a far-away brooklet. "It was a splendid chase, Mr. O'Rourke!" she cried, her blue eyes agleam. "And the Green Comet could have pulled away from you, if I had willed it so."

"And I don't know about that, either," retorted Officer O'Rourke, perking up at the challenge. Then his ruddy, cherry face became gloomy again. "But, faith, madam, ye're the one that brought pink roses to me Timmie when the lad near died."

The lady colored, though she still smiled. "Tut, tut!" she scolded. "What's the harm in that, Mr. O'Rourke?"

"Harm, harm!" spluttered Officer O'Rourke. "Twas a blessed good deed, and may ye live till ye're a million—but 'tis not Michael O'Rourke that will arrest ye."

"Oh!" protested the lady, "but I am already arrested—three times—for exceeding the speed limit, for scaring men, women, babies and horses, for breaking the record through!"

"But you scattered a car load of potatoes over the Tin Can ward when the laddies were starvin'!" continued Officer O'Rourke. "Sure and I'll not arrest ye till the sun turns green as Ireland!"

"Yes, yes, Mr. O'Rourke," said the lady, soberly. "It is your duty, you know, and it was a clear violation. Come on to the station."

"No!" thundered Officer O'Rourke, "not for a thousand harps av gold!" "Come on," repeated the blessed lady, and she wheeled the green car about.

"No!" declared Officer O'Rourke. "I'd tear me stripes off first."

"Come on," said the lady for the third time very firmly. "I don't mind."

"No," reiterated Officer O'Rourke; "not for a deed of Tipperary!"

"But, as the good lady of Delmont street was station bound on her own account, at a rate that threatened to do things to the speed regulations once more, No. 42 of the park squad had no choice but to follow fast. As he went, however, he mumbled sullenly, swearing every green-and-gold oath he knew that he would rather lose his right arm, and almost running down a careless pushcart man in his abstraction."

At the station the drowsy captain roused to receive two clamorous visitors.

"I'm arrested," said the lady, smiling bewilderingly. "How much will it be this time, Captain Day?"

"I resign," announced Officer O'Rourke, shoving over his gilt badge. "I won't arrest an angel!"

The captain stared at his subordinate in surprise, but the lady laughed musically.

"Tell Officer O'Rourke just how many times I've been here for speeding," she directed. "Tell him about my wild speed streak, and tell me how much this time!"

The captain grinned broadly. "I think, if you will deposit $25, ma'am, there'll be no need of your bothering to come back." And to Officer O'Rourke he said: "This is the forty-eighth time for Mrs. Dunlap this season, Michael. She likes it and she's rich—she can afford it. Don't let it worry you, man." And he returned to Officer O'Rourke gilt badge No. 42, park police.

As the green car sped smoothly away, Officer O'Rourke refastened his beloved emblem of authority. "No wonder she's a speeder," he murmured. "Angels are just that bound to fly."

And Officer O'Rourke thought again of a great cluster of pink roses by the bed of the child of his heart.—Stewart Stone.

Claim To Have Discovered Dynamite

Suspected to Kill General Otis at Dayton.

Dayton, O., May 11.—Intense excitement prevailed at the National officers' home when a stick of dynamite, sufficient to blow up any one of the big buildings on the home grounds, was found near the main entrance. Sensational rumors followed the mysterious find, among these being that General Otis, owner of the Los Angeles Times, who is scheduled to visit the home today, is an intended victim.

Sword of Nevarro

Madero said: "All I can say is Bueno."

"Shall I say that it is to be Mexico City for you?" "Oh, we'll see," said Madero.

As soon as the insurgents took the town the officers made every possible effort to close the saloons and prevent the men drinking. A great deal of liquor was destroyed and guards were placed over all saloons. However, the men got hold of much rum. Lieutenant Colonel Garibaldi led the charge through the town after Colonel Blanco's command had worked its way up behind the jail, then gained it and drove the federals out of the old church and the city buildings. Garibaldi first ordered the liquor destroyed. Later Pasqual Orozco gave orders to have all saloons kept closed. So far there is almost perfect order and a minimum of drunkenness. Ciudad Juarez is destined to be the first prohibition town in Mexico. Abram Gonzales, provincial governor of Chihuahua, declares that Juarez saloons will be closed continuously until the insurgents leave the city. Every other precaution is being taken to prevent disorder. Many of the insurgents entered saloons at the beginning of the fight and secured bottles of liquor, but in their hilarity they distributed it among their friends, so that altogether no one man got very much to drink.

All the dead are being buried. A conservative estimate by physicians, as well as of insurgent leaders who surveyed the fighting, puts the federal dead at nearly 50 and the rebel loss at about 15, with a total of nearly 250 wounded on both sides. The actual number lost probably never will be known, as deserters were many and the dead have been buried quickly.

Cavalry In Hot Pursuit.

The rebel cavalry under Colonel Villa, the fleetest of the revolutionary horsemen, when last seen were in hot pursuit of a detachment of federals fleeing to the south.

As soon as the town surrendered the insurgent commanders put the former municipal officers to work gathering up the dead and burying them, and doctors from El Paso began moving to the scene with bandages and medicine for the aid of the wounded. Temporary hospitals were rigged up in several buildings in Juarez, and there men received treatment at the hands of the El Paso physicians. Dead men were found along the streetcar tracks, in street gutters, under counters in stores, in the back rooms of saloons, in courtyards and everywhere, having used every possible location for protection, and as fast as they were located they were buried. Some were buried in the courtyards of the houses where they fell.

It was a happy looking lot of federals who marched through the lines of insurgents to become prisoners. "Viva El Constitution!" they shouted as they put down their rifles, smiled, laughed and almost jumped for joy. The federal soldiers, after surrendering to the insurgents, stripped off their uniforms and threw them away. The street leading down from the Cuartel to the city prison and municipal office, to which point the prisoners were marched, is full of uniforms cast aside by the men after the surrender. The prisoners are in their underclothes. They did this to show the insurgents that they had renounced their allegiance to the federal government.

Government Says Nothing.

Mexico City, May 11.—While the foreign office refused to make a statement regarding the fall of Juarez, it is considered here by well informed persons and it seems the general opinion of the public, that Navarro's surrender clears the situation and peace is bound to follow immediately. As the rebels make the conditions of peace the resignation of President Diaz, it follows that this will be announced shortly.

An Effective Prayer.

"Years ago," says a well known actor, "I appeared in an amateur performance of a play that had a distinct religious flavor. The leading player had studied for the ministry and had a deep and sonorous voice. In one of the scenes the lights were supposed to be turned down and a raging storm simulated. The accompanying lines were:

"O Lord, deliver us from the powers of darkness."

"The leading man spoke the lines, but darkness didn't follow. He spoke them again, and still the stage was distressingly light. Finally he roared: "O Lord, deliver us from the power of darkness and also give that fool gas man sense enough to turn down the lights."

"The gas lights went down, and the audience roared."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

Even Tempered.

"Is your husband even tempered?" "Yes," answered Mrs. Wuryrd, "he's even tempered enough. He's just about as irritable one day as another."

The Box Was Good.

Wife—Wasn't that a good box of cigars I gave you on your last birthday? Husband—Yes, I never saw a better box, my dear.

Tampa In Turmoil Over Decision of Circuit Court.

Tampa, Fla., May 11.—Resenting the action of Judge Wail of the circuit court in affirming the sentence of one year's imprisonment imposed on the leaders in the recent strike here, the cigarmakers of West Tampa and Ybor City went on a general strike.

Preceding the declaration of the strike, 4,000 cigarmakers marched through the streets, all singing the Marseillaise and carrying red flags. The streets are crowded with excited strikers and it is feared there will be disorder. The police force has been doubled and the sheriff has sworn in many deputies.

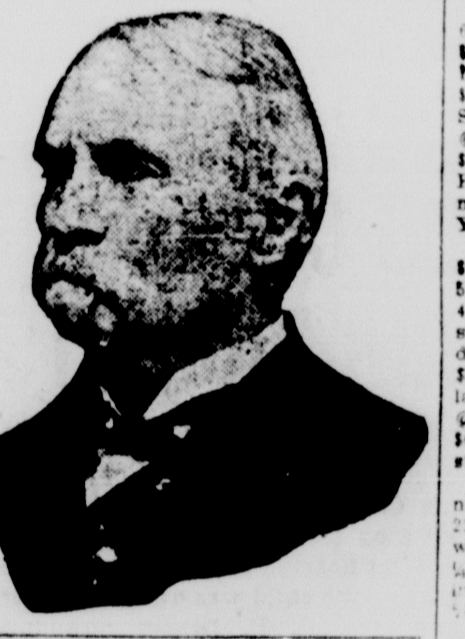

Phipps Testifies.

Columbus, O., May 11.—William H. Phipps of Paulding, who was subpoenaed to appear before the grand jury in the legislative bribery scandal as he was preparing to embark at San Francisco for the Philippines, reached Columbus and began his testimony before the grand jury graft hearing. The story is that Phipps, while in Columbus several weeks ago in the interest of the Cleveland subway bill, was approached by a member of the house and asked for a bribe.

Pastor Arrests Dancers.

Akron, O., May 11.—"Every little movement had a meaning of its own" in a dance put on at the Grand opera house by the Monte Carlo Girls company, according to Rev. A. W. Bailey of the First Baptist church, who caused the arrest of the dancers, Lanita and Myrtle Clark, O. L. Elsler, manager of the theater, and Tom Sullivan, manager of the company. The dancers probably will try to vindicate their performance by doing their dance in court.

Force Yourself to Be Well.

"Plant your feet firmly and squarely on the ground, throw back your shoulders, fold your arms and affirm in most emphatic terms that you are strong, healthy and well. Do this for a few minutes every evening, and, even if this is not how you actually feel, maintain by your physical and mental attitude that it is your condition, and you will soon find that it becomes so and that you are not really telling lies." This was the advice given by Dr. J. Stenson Hooker in a lecture on "Posturing and Posing For Health" at the simple life conference and exhibition in London. "It is wonderful to what extent our state of health can be altered in this way," Dr. Hooker added. "It stirs up the currents of feeling which act on the nerves. These act on the blood vessels, and thus the whole system is improved, and we become different beings."

The Repentance.

"Men are so hideously lacking in self control," a young girl once said to her mother.

"Well, don't find fault with that," the mother answered. "If they weren't most girls would die old maids."

Friendship.

In the hour of distress and misery the eye of every mortal turns to friendship. In the hour of gladness and conviviality what is your want? It is friendship.

SAVED CHILD FROM DEATH.

"After our child had suffered from severe bronchial trouble for a year," wrote G. T. Richardson, of Richardson's Mills, Ala., "we feared it had consumption. It had a bad cough all the time. We tried many remedies without avail, and doctor's medicine seemed as useless. Finally we tried Dr. King's New Discovery, and are pleased to say that one bottle effected a complete cure, and our child is again strong and healthy." For coughs, colds, hoarseness, lagrippe, asthma, croup and sore lungs, its the most infallible remedy that's made. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by Blackmer & Tanquary.

Pyramid of the Sun.

The most colossal structure of prehistoric man in America, known as the pyramid of the sun, is at Teotihuacan, Mexico, not far from the capital. Close to the great pyramid stands the pyramid of the moon, which the builders regarded as the wife of the sun, and surrounding them are nearly 200 mounds of greater or lesser magnitude, which tradition says were crowned by temples and public buildings. Two hundred and sixty-eight steps lead to the summit of the pyramid of the sun, which is 216 feet high. It is 761 feet square at the base, and the summit is 59 by 105 feet.—National Geographic Magazine.

A Real One.

"Is this a problem play?" asked the one night stand critic of the manager. "It is," replied that worthy. "And what," asked the critic, "is the special problem presented?" "How to get money enough into the box office for railroad fares to our next date," said the manager, with pointed brevity.—Baltimore American.

The Quiet Toiler.

"Tis not he who parades
His deeds before the world,
Holding aloft their worth,
Whose memory lives imperiled
In the hearts of a people when
The years have died away,
But rather the man who toils
On quietly day by day.

"Tis he who at his task,
Be it high or be it lowly,
Strives with nerve, a thought
Of self and praise, but wholly
Lost in the love of duty,
Who deems no man his debtor
And quietly toils each day
To make the world ever better.

JUDGE AWARDS CUSTODY OF CHILD TO GRANDPARENTS

The case of Eritte Draper vs.
Mary Draper, in which a modification of the order of the court granting custody of their child to Mrs. Draper, was sought, was heard before Judge Patton Thursday, with Prosecuting Attorney Laybourne, of Clark county representing Mrs. Draper.

On October 25th, 1909, Mrs. Draper was granted a divorce from Eritte Draper and awarded custody of the small daughter, and some time ago
Mrs. Draper brought suit against Eritte Draper for non-support of the minor child, the case still pending in the Clark county courts and will come up May 17th.

After hearing the evidence the custody of the child was awarded to Mr.
and Mrs. E. E. Draper, grandparents of the child. As Mrs. Draper has been making only $3 per week, it has been impossible for her to support the child as it should be supported.

Mrs. Draper lives in Springfield.
Lee Rankin of this city represented
Eritte Draper.

Savage Dog Attacks Small Child

This afternoon a large shepherd dog owned by Wm. Craig, of the Jeffersonville pike, attacked Malcolm, the 3-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs.
Craig, badly lacerating its face.

Dr. Decatur was called and dressed the child's wounds.

The dog has been penned up and will be watched closely for signs of the rabies. The animal, while savage, has never before attacked children.

The Peculiar Sand Fly.
The sand fly is perfectly harmless.
It does not bite. It has no sting. It cannot even eat. All it can do is to sit about for a few hours, enjoy the light of day or the glare of an electric lamp. The sand fly is known to scientists familiarly as the May fly. In scientific terms it is called ephemerida.
This name is taken from the Greek word ephemerous, which means lasting only for a day. To the scientists the sand fly is one of the most interesting and beautiful of insects. The fly lives but a day at most, but before it sees the light it has lived from one to three years under the water in the form of what the scientists call a nymph. The nymph can both walk and swim. As it grows it molts, and after about the ninth molt tiny wings appear on its thorax. These grow larger until the insect comes forth from the water a sand fly. It then has but one duty—to lay its eggs. This done, the sand fly signs through the air until its brief life is ended.

No Decision In Bond Issue Case

The Circuit court among the cases disposed of did not announce its conclusions in the contested election case from Wayne township in which it is sought to enjoin the issue and sale of $30,000 of bonds to build new school houses.

The Court announced that the decision would be given later on after a more careful examination of the evidence and the legal questions.

A DOUBLE MYSTERY.

Chester Ward was an angler. When summer came around and it was time for vacation he always hid himself to the woods and waters with his rod, established himself at some point about which fish congregate and proceeded to enjoy the days. He never took a companion with him for the reason that he had no chum who loved fishing as he did, and any one who was indifferent to the sport would spoil it for him.

One summer Mr. Ward located his headquarters at the village of D., surrounded by lakes, in which were many kinds of fish, and by streams well stocked with trout. On the morning after his arrival, before other people had risen, he was stepping lightly along the street of the village, armed to the teeth with weapons to attack fish, moving in the direction of the lake, when he passed a white cottage with green blinds. On the porch hung a small school blackboard, on which was chalked:

Ice-Cream.
Ward surmised that the first was a notice to the ice man and the second a notice to the milkman. Thinking it would be a good joke to make a sign of it, he took up a piece of chalk that lay handy on a window sill and wrote under the other words "and soda water," so that it read:

Ice Cream—and Soda Water.
When he returned in the evening the blackboard had been wiped clean, but the next morning when he went out again he saw written on it:

Fish.
By this time he was a bit ashamed of himself for having interfered with some housewife, as he supposed, in her notifications to tradesmen, and, desiring to make reparation, he returned to his quarters and, selecting a fine pickerel from his mess of the day before, left it at the back door, where it would doubtless be discovered by the cook when she came down and opened up the kitchen for the day.

The next morning as Ward passed on his daily journey to the fishing grounds he looked, as usual, for the notice of what was wanted in the way of supplies. The notice read:

Trout.
It so happened that he had brought home a fine string of trout the day before, and, being quite pleased at the whimsical idea of furnishing supplies to the housewife who supposed she was getting them from the tradesman, he turned again to his quarters, got half a dozen fat trout and deposited them at the kitchen door. He chuckled to himself at the dialogue between the housewife and the fishmonger in their efforts to explain the mystery. There was a bit of mystery for him as well. On his return evenings, which was usually about 5 o'clock, when he passed the house he looked at it, hoping to catch sight of the housewife, for at that hour, of course, every one in the town was stirring. But never once did he see a human being in or about the cottage.

On the fourth morning that Ward went out on his journey the sign on the blackboard read:

Berries.
It happened that the route to the fishing ground was lined with luscious blackberries. Ward, who by this time was nearly as much interested in the requirement of the white cottage as with his fishing, hurried on, gathered a couple of quarts of berries, went back to the house and deposited them in a heap on the morning paper. Then he sped away, fearing some one might get out of bed and discover him.

The next morning came a surprise. When Ward looked at the blackboard he did so with wide open eyes. There was the word:

Flowers.
Now, there were no flowers to be purchased in the village, at any rate at that hour in the morning. But Ward had seen lots of wild flowers in the woods. He repeated his effort of the day before only this time he gathered flowers instead of berries, and hurried back to the house with them. Instead of taking them to the kitchen he stepped nimbly on to the porch and was about to lay them before the front door when it opened, and there stood as pretty a girl as he had ever seen, blushing, laughing and, above all, her eyes dancing with mischief. He doffed his hat.

"I have to thank you," said the girl, "for the delicious fish and berries you have brought me and now for these beautiful flowers."

"So it's you who have the joke on me instead of I the joke on you?"

"I was up and dressing when you passed the first morning. Hearing some one on the porch, I looked through the blinds and saw you go away with your rod and basket. When I went down I found the change you had made on the board. Knowing that you were a fisherman, I resolved to get even with you. I have kept getting even ever since."

"But why have I never seen any one about in the day?"

"A party of us, all schoolteachers, have taken this cottage for our vacation and are to keep splinters' hall here. I have some ahead to prepare the way. Meanwhile, being alone here, I have spent much time elsewhere. The others will be here this morning. Will you dine with us this evening?"

"With pleasure, and will provide supplies."—Edmond Compton.

First Flying Ambulance.
A valued servant and friend of the great Napoleon, Dominique Larrey, first established that system of "flying ambulances," which carried the wounded to the rear almost as soon as disabled. The staff numbered about 340 men with four heavy and twelve light two and four wheeled ambulances to each division. Napoleon reviewed this arm of the service with the greatest interest and once exclaimed to Larrey: "Your work is one of the most important conceptions of our age. It will suffice for your reputation." For the Egyptian campaign Larrey secured the services of 800 qualified surgeons in addition to the regular force. At Alexandria General Figueres was severely wounded, and on his recovery wished to present Napoleon with a splendid Damascus saber. "Yes," said the emperor, "I accept in order to give it the surgeon in chief, by whose exertions your life has been spared." This saber, engraved with the words "Aboukir" and "Larrey," was taken from the great surgeon by the Prussians at Waterloo. Charles Winslow Hall in National Magazine.

The Horrors of Thirst.
In the oasis of Muzara, says L. Dow Covington in the Wide World Magazine, we had a first experience of the desert traveler's great enemy—thirst. We were seated in front of a Bedouin chief's tent, our two baby camels enjoying their first drink of water since they had left Cairo, when, from across a sand dune, a Bedouin came staggering and tottering toward us. His eyes were bloodshot, his lips twice their natural size, while his tongue, blue and dry, hung out of his mouth. Evidently he had lost himself, had wandered around for days in search of water and had stumbled upon the oasis in the very nick of time. To allow him to drink would have been his death. In spite of his frantic struggles, he was held by four men, while a fifth allowed a few drops of water to trickle down his throat. It was as though he were a red-hot boiler which would have to be allowed to cool off before being filled if an accident was to be avoided.

Objected to Publicity.
Old Brother Brown had been approached several times by the colored deacons of his church and asked to pay his church dues. He had promised to "pay up" just as soon as he sold a calf which he owned. Several months later he sold the calf. The next Sunday morning at service the congregation sang the old familiar hymn: The half has never been told of life so full and free.

Brother Brown, somewhat deaf and conscious of his failure to pay his dues, understood the words to be:

The calf has never been sold, but when it's sold he'll pay.

When the hymn was finished the old colored man, very indignant, arose and said:
"Bredren and sistahs, I has sold dat calf and heh's yo' ten dollahs! But I didn't ca' about de whole church singin' about it."—National Monthly.

A Costly Tuft of Feathers.
On the apex of the crown worn by the Prince of Wales on special occasions is a curious feather, or, rather, tuft of feathers, the top of which is adorned with a gold thread. The value of this feather is estimated at $50,000, and it has the distinction of being the only one of its kind in human possession. Twenty years passed after the first hunter set out to procure the feather before it was attained, and during that period more than a dozen hunters had lost their lives in the quest. The costly tuft is of poriwak feathers, and the extraordinary danger incurred in procuring it was due to the fact that the poriwak, for some unknown reason, is to be found only in dense jungles in which tigers make their lair.—Chicago Tribune.

Turning the Turtle.
Turtle hunting is not without excitement. The method of capture consists of the simple act of turning the turtle on its back. Once in this position it is quite helpless. Its only defense is to cover its cap with sand thrown up by the powerful front legs or flippers. These are brought into action in an instant, and woe betide the captor who has his eyes and mouth open at the moment, for the sand is hurled with great force. When turned over the captive is dragged up the beach to above high water mark, and this is no easy task, for it weighs about four hundredweight.

HIS FIERCENESS APPEARED.

America is far from Europe, and the poorer classes know very little about the western continent. When I was a boy I was one morning at the Hotel des Invalides, in Paris, with my father. He was speaking in French with a pensioner. Presently my father burst into a laugh. I asked him what he was laughing at. He said that he had told the Frenchman that he was an American. "No," replied the old soldier, "Americans are all black."

Some years ago an American wild west show visited Budapest. There were the usual fusillades, individual shootings and stagecoach robberies. The people who saw them got an idea that all Americans shot and shot to kill, on the slightest provocation. I spent a few days at the place soon after the show had passed on, registering from my home, Toledo, O. The day after my arrival I saw some citizens over the register debating in an excited fashion about just where in America Toledo was, whether it was on the Atlantic or Pacific coast, one man declaring that it was in the Allegheny mountains, the region of the fiercest tribes of cowboys. Suddenly catching sight of me, they scattered like a flock of birds among which a stone had been thrown.

The same evening I attended a performance in a music hall. A little, deformed girl, with pale cheeks and great, flaring black eyes, was selling programs. A writer moving across the floor with half a dozen glasses of beer poised on a tray above his head, not seeing the child, ran her down. The six glasses of beer went crashing on the floor, and the waiter fell on the girl. As she and he rose in his irritation he gave her a cuff, saying, "Take that for getting in my way."

Now, I am a mild-mannered, peaceful man, nothing of a knight errant, but I thought the waiter should be reproved for giving way to his temper and the little girl given a tip to make up for the blow she had received, so I said:

"Waiter, you had no business to strike the child in that manner. The accident was your fault. You should have looked about you to see if anybody was in your way."

As I spoke I put my hand to my hip pocket to get out my portemonnaie, which I always carry there, to give the little program seller a coin.

The noise of the fall had attracted the attention of every one in the hall. All eyes were upon the waiter, the girl and me. As I spoke those farthest away from me got on chairs to see what I was going to do. I had been pointed out to many of them as an American, and as they saw that I was displeased at the waiter they considered him in imminent danger. When I put my hand to my hip pocket there was the most remarkable commotion I have ever had the honor to occasion. Indeed, it is the only glittering spot in my otherwise uneventful life.

There was a wild scramble at the tables nearest me to get out of the way. The men knocked over the chairs, jumped across tables; the women shrieked; the children (they take their children to such places abroad) cried.

The manager came fighting his way toward me and when he got near enough shouted to me: "Do not shoot. Everything you require shall be done. What will appease you?"

It suddenly occurred to me to turn the score to account for the little program girl.

"I'm not going to kill any one," I said, "but I have a suggestion to make. Let us take up a collection for this poor little girl, who received a cuff she did not deserve."

I had my portemonnaie, not a revolver, in my hand and, opening it, took out a bill, dropped it in my hat and gave it to the manager. He stood on a chair and as soon as he could make himself heard, said:

"The American will not fight if we take up a collection for the program girl. Let us ransom Carl Steffens, the waiter who offended him. Carl is a poor man and he has a large family."

With that he went around with the hat. Every person in the assembly considered that he was bound to disgorge as he had seen stagecoach passengers disgorge to road agents in the wild west show. When the hat came back it was brimful of bills and coins. The manager handed it to me, and pouring its contents into my handkerchief, I handed it to the child. The manager got on a table and cried:

"The American is appeased. Now go quietly to your homes."

The people shrank away—that is, those who were left, for a goodly number had departed by the door and windows. Some who had to pass me looked at me with timid curiosity and when they were obliged to present their backs to me hurried out as if afraid to trust me behind them. When they had all gone except the landlord he bowed very low and said to me:

"When may I reassure our people that your excellency has departed?"

To assume such a commanding position by striking a people with terror even in so ridiculous a manner has its effect. I confess myself affected by it. I could fancy how it was that even the great Napoleon got the big head.

"You may tell them," I said, "that I am much pleased with their generosity. I leave by the train tonight."—George Disney Mills.

Liquid Yeast

Take one-half cake of compressed yeast and dissolve it thoroughly. Boil four medium sized potatoes until perfectly soft. Put one-half cup of granulated sugar into your yeast jar and pour the boiling potato water over it, being particular to have fully one pint. When cooled until about tepid, pour the dissolved yeast into it and stir thoroughly. Set in a warm place for four or five hours to ferment and be particular to not disturb it.

After it has thoroughly worked, put in a jar and set aside in a cool place until regular baking day. To make bread, boil potatoes at the noon hour and have fully one quart of water when they are cooked. Pour this boiling water into a jar over one-half cup granulated sugar.

Let cool as above and then pour into it the pint of liquid yeast and stir well. Set in a warm place for five or six hours, when it will become quite foamy on top, showing that it is fermenting.

In the evening take out a pint as usual for a "start" for next baking, and mix the balance with flour for your regular bread baking yeast, making it only stiff enough to stir with a spoon.

This will be thoroughly light in two or three hours and ready to make into bread before retiring, leaving the bread to get light over night.

By using the pint of liquid yeast kept out each time, together with the sugar and pint of potato water, I have prepared a "start" for dozens of my friends, not one of whom would go back to the old method for the quality of the bread could not be improved.

Attractive Dessert

One egg, white and yolk beaten separately, to which add one and one-half cups granulated sugar and one glass purple grape jelly. If the jelly is stiff warm it slightly first, so it will more easily blend with the other ingredients. Stir all together with one quart of good fresh buttermilk. Then freeze the same as any ice cream, adding the juice of two lemons when partly frozen. The combination of buttermilk and grape jelly produces a most perfect violet shade, while the flavor of the "cream" is as pleasing to the palate as the color is to the eye.

Violet or similar green leaves should decorate the base of the cream when it is served. This quantity will serve ten people. If buttermilk is not available, good sour milk will do. Cake—Bake any preferred simple white or sponge cake in a sheet. When cold, cut in squares and frost on top and sides with a white icing. In one corner of each piece make a small loop of narrow stiff white paper, covering each end with the frosting, and letting the loop project only enough to admit the stems of a few violets, just enough to decorate each piece daintily. If fresh violets are not available, a pretty decoration can be made with the candied violet leaves and slices of citron cut in the shape of leaves.

Marshmallow Cream

Dissolve one rounded tablespoonful of granulated gelatin in one-half cup of cold water and stir over the fire until dissolved. Add another one-half cup of cold water to the hot gelatin and let it stand to cool a little until you separate the whites of four eggs. Beat the whites with a tiny pinch of salt until very light, then pour the gelatin slowly into the beaten whites, beating all the time, then beat in one cup of sugar and one teaspoon of almond extract till thick as whipped cream. Take one-half of mixture and color pink with vegetable coloring; spread on bottom of dish like a layer of cake, then sprinkle with chopped nuts; then take the other half, color it light green, spread on top of the pink layer, then nuts again, then a layer of whipped cream. When cold it can be cut like cake and is attractive, indeed. Can be made up in any desired color.

Good Dishes made from Salsify

One of the difficulties in preparing vegetable oyster, or salsify, is to clean it. The traditional way of scrubbing, then scraping, and lastly cutting up and leaving to stand in cold water, containing a little flour to prevent blackening, is far more troublesome and less satisfactory in bringing out the oyster flavor than is the following process:

Scrub the salsify, discarding the greens, and put to cook in boiling salted water.

When tender, in time varying from 20 minutes to almost three-quarters of an hour, drain and let steam for just a moment; then, holding the vegetable knife lengthwise of the plant and beginning at the stout end, skin as you would a boiled potato.

In selecting salsify the thickness of the root does not seem to be a constant indication of its age or toughness; more often a thick, heavy skin will be the wrapper around a rather woody root, apt to have a strong flavor, while a lighter and more tender skin contains the more delicate vegetable.

Therefore, the very thin roots are not desirable, because they are not necessarily more tender, and are far more troublesome to pare. The bunches, as usually sold in the east, serve four people easily; in the middle west they come smaller.

A slight seasoning of anchovy paste is optional in all of the following recipes.

Vegetable Oyster Creamed.

Slice or cut into small pieces some freshly cooked salsify. Before it becomes chilled add sufficient milk to cover, season generously with salt and pepper, stir in very fine cracker dust, allowing about one and one-half tablespoons to a cup of milk, and in the same proportion one tablespoon of butter. Heat this, stirring occasionally, until thoroughly cooked, adding more cracker dust if needed. The exact proportion of this thickening must be separately ascertained for each variety, as cracker dusts vary greatly in their thickening properties. To bring out the flavor of salsify, cracker dust is far preferable to flour as thickening. This dish may or may not be served on toast, with a garnish of parsley.

Mock Fried Oysters.

Prepare the salsify as in the foregoing recipe or use a leftover from it. Mash, with a fork, to an even consistency, blending in enough of the cream sauce to soften the mass, but not so much but that it can be molded. Shape as oysters, bread by rolling in bread or cracker crumbs; then, dipping in egg slightly beaten with a little milk or water, and a shake each of pepper and salt, cover again with crumbs and saute or fry in deep fat. Garnish with parsley or watercress.

Salsify Croquettes.

Proceed, as in the foregoing recipe adding two beaten eggs for each cup of pulp. Shape into small croquettes, bread them and fry in deep fat.

Vegetable Oyster Salad.

Cut into short lengths some boiled salsify and stew for a few moments in rich milk or thin cream, not quite sufficient to cover, seasoned with salt and red pepper.

Drain the milk into a separate dish, then mash the salsify to a very even consistency, adding gradually the milk until the pulp is well softened, but can still be molded.

Mix in two tablespoons of peanut butter for each cup of pulp and two tablespoons of vinegar. Serve on lettuce with a generous amount of mayonnaise or boiled dressing, to which whipped cream has been added.

This dish may be garnished with a sprinkling of finely chopped nuts; whole nuts should not be used, as they destroy the delicacy of the flavor.

Cream of Salsify Soup.

Into three-fourths of a cup of mashed salsify (previously cooked until tender,) stir gradually one pint of scalded milk and one pint of boiling water.

Thicken with three tablespoons of fine cracker dust and season with two tablespoons of butter, one-half teaspoon or more of salt and a dash of pepper, preferably cayenne. Serve with a topping of whipped cream very slightly seasoned with salt.

Moose and Vamoose.

It was up in the great north woods. "Gracious, but I am nervous," faltered the city hunter. "What is the best thing to do when you sight your first moose?"

"Well, pardner," laughed the guide, "if you are nervous the best to do is to vamoose."

Gasoline-Heated Brooders

The use of gasoline to develop heat for brooders has many points to commend it to those who raise poultry on a fairly large scale; the system involves broods of 200 chicks, so that it is not suitable for those who have only small hatches.

The principal advantages in using gasoline rather than kerosene are to secure a higher temperature when needed without forcing the heater and to save time and labor by having one brooder house serve for 200 chicks instead of 50 as is usually the case.

The form of house in which the gasoline heater is used is called the "A" type of colony house. This house is constructed 8 feet square, inside floor measurement, has 12-inch side walls and is 6 feet 6 inches from top of floor to top of ridge board. It is made with a bevel at each end to form runners or shoes upon which to draw the house about when desired.

Gasoline Heater Used in Brooder House.

Runners 6 inches high have been used with satisfactory results, but more often runners 10 or 12 inches high are used. The runners may be placed at the sides or ends. If the houses are to be used in orchards, it is advisable to place the runners on the sides, because this allows the house to be drawn between the rows of trees with less danger of striking.

The greatest of care should be exercised in installing the gasoline heater, as any loose fitting connection would cause leakage of gases into the hovel. The form of burner that has been found the most satisfactory is one that gives the cone-shaped blaze directed up into the radiator, instead of being sent out in jets at right angles to the burner. It gives more complete combustion than the cap type of burner and is capable of a wider range of temperature, giving a flame sufficiently large to maintain the proper temperature under the hovel when it is below zero outside. The burner selected should have but one control valve, as it is less complicated and less likely to clog.

Since there is only one flame to 200 chicks, instead of 4 as in the case of using kerosene-heated brooders with only 50 chicks each, the risk of fire is reduced to that extent, and any one intelligent enough to be trusted with kerosene-heated brooders can manage gasoline-heated ones, with equal safety.

The common points of error which result disastrously are: allowing too much gasoline to run into the generating cup; applying a match to the generating cup before the control valve is closed; attempting to light the burner after it has blown out in some manner and the bottom of the burner box is covered with gasoline. That is, it can be turned very low for use in mild weather or will all of the above should be carefully avoided.

The burner should always be turned out and the wheel valve closed while the tank is being filled. To light the burner open the valve and allow the gasoline to fill the generating cup nearly full, then close. Light the gasoline and allow it to burn out. Open the control valve and hold a lighted match over the top of the burner. This will give a bright blue, cone-shaped flame, which should never be turned so high as to show red.

See that the house stands level. If it tips forward the gasoline which would flow if the flame should be extinguished would remain in the burner box. Never light the burner while there is gasoline or vapor in the box.

Eddystone Lighthouse.

The Eddystone lighthouse, fourteen miles off Plymouth, England, and exposed to the full fury of the south-western seas, was built by Winstanley in four seasons. Begun in 1696 and finished in 1700, it was destroyed in the dreadful storm of 1703. The second structure was completed in 1709 and destroyed in 1755, after it had faced the wind and the waves for something over forty-six years. The third tower, finished in 1759 and condemned in 1875, was followed by the present wonderful structure, which since 1882 has been defying the elements while it flashed out over the terrible waters its saving light. Since the brave Winstanley built the first Eddystone lighthouse similar safeguards have sprung up like magic sentinels along all the coasts of all the oceans, and those who sail upon the great deeps of the earth are forewarned and forearmed against the dangers which threaten them—New York American.

The Last Luxury.

Ten-year-old Arthur had been telling impressively of the number of servants employed in his home. He continued, "And our house is fixed so that if you want a drink or a window raised or to go upstairs or anything all you have to do is to pull a chain." "But what do you want with so many servants in that sort of a house?" asked one of his hearers. "Oh," replied Arthur, "we have the servants to pull the chains."—Judge.
